PROFILE

Nicola Cattani is an Italian cinematographer and a member of the AIC. He works between Milan, Rome and Trentino, in Italy and abroad.

His work always starts from the story. He sees himself as an interpreter in the service of the director and the actors, using light and framing as storytelling tools.

He has worked in the darkroom since he was fourteen and trained at ISIA Urbino, between graphic design and the large-format view camera. In Rome he started out in digital visual effects, working on Paul Schrader's "Dominion", shot by Vittorio Storaro, and then on Marco Bellocchio's sets. That experience shaped his method: building the image on set with the final result already in mind.

He is the cinematographer on feature films, shorts, commercials, fashion films and music videos, and when the project allows he operates the camera himself. He has shot in Italy, China, Nepal, Qatar, South Africa, Zimbabwe and the United States.

He teaches cinematography at the Sentieri Selvaggi film school in Rome and at MOODART in Verona; he has led workshops at NABA in Rome and, with Sergio Cremasco, for Blackmagic Design Italia at Moses in Verona.
